The Bay St. Louis City Council has awarded a grant for the Katrina High Water Mark Revitalization Project. The project will enable local artists to design and paint “Welcome to BSL” murals on concrete slabs at I-10 Exit 13, the northern most gateway in Bay St. Louis.

The slabs were constructed in 2010 to memorialize the flood peak water level after 2005 Hurricane Katrina. The project is a collaboration between the City of Bay St. Louis and the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce. Tish Williams, Executive Director of the Hancock Chamber stated, “We have a long history of partnering with the City of Bay St. Louis and our local artists to create opportunities to beautify our landscape, showcase our diversity and engage our community. Building on that history, it’s a great time to take on this project. I am so glad to see this vision to beautify the I-10 entrance mural become reality thanks to a grant from the city.”

Michelle Fleming and Steve Barney from the Hancock Leadership Program will manage the project. Fleming,

Gov. Reeves visits Stennis International for new RESTORE Hangar ribbon cutting

SEA COAST ECHO

U.S. Rep. Steven Palazzo and Gov. Tate Reeves joined local officials and industry representatives on Wednesday at Stennis International Airport for a ribbon cutting ceremony at a new 24,000-square-foot hangar.

Known as the RESTORE Hangar, the state-of-the-art facility is adjacent to the main terminal and opens directly to the main ramp. It features a hangar door that is 154 feet wide and 28 feet high. The premier location includes utility rooms, restrooms and a foam fire suppression system.

“The new hangar at Stennis International Airport is an embodiment of the great investments that the RESTORE Act has brought to south Mississippi since it was passed by Congress in 2012. This bill was intended to revitalize our Gulf Coast communities, and through projects like this state-of-the-art hangar, it is doing just that. I’m proud to see a piece of legislation that I championed bringing so many new jobs to our home and that this community airport remains a premiere destination for aviation, military, and industry partners,” said Congressman Steven Palazzo.

Restoration in Mississippi — as Black History Month approaches, a timely project unveiling

The original beaded board was consolidated into one of the four original rooms. The colors – white and aquamarine – were left as they were found. The sign reads: Turkey Creek: An historic black community settled in 1866 by emancipated men and women who, emboldened by slavery and civil war, dared to sow the seeds of freedom, faith, and self-reliance which flourish here still.

Derrick Evans purchased the structure in 2003 to preserve the legacy and restore it to become a community archive and meeting place. It was damaged further in 2005 by Hurricane Katrina. The National Park Service awarded an African-American Civil Rights Program grant of nearly $500,000 to rehabilitate the structure.

SEA COAST ECHO

The Phoenix Naval Stores unveils its completed renovation after almost two decades of restoration—just in time for the 78th anniversary of the devastating plant explosion that occurred in 1943.

Bay St. Louis-based unabridged Architecture has been working with activist Derrick Evans since 2015 to restore the building.

Funded by a National Park Service Civil Rights Program Grant, the renovation has transformed the wood-framed building into a community history center and archive for the Turkey Creek community, the independent African-American settlement north of Gulfport Mississippi. The paymaster's office building was the only structure that was left of the old Yaryan-Phoenix Naval Stores and was listed as one of Mississippi's 10 Most Endangered Places.

After a teaching tenure in Boston, Evans returned home in 2003 to find that Turkey Creek had been annexed to Gulfport against its will and was facing a range of political and ecological threats to its existence. He made the decision to remain in Turkey Creek where he founded and directs Turkey Creek Community Initiatives, whose aim is to promote sustainable local development that is both environmentally and culturally sensitive. The restoration of the once-dilapidated Phoenix Naval Stores has been a critical part of the community's vision. He said that teaching history in Boston didn't feel right when the place that taught him history—Turkey Creek—was being erased.

The Phoenix Naval Stores laments the loss of place while symbolizing faith, fortune, and hard work. It pays homage to Black resilience, preservation, and community heritage in a place that has been especially subject to economic disadvantages and racial segregation.

This developing story was also made into a documentary Come Hell or High Water in 2011 and Derrick's activism was featured on The Daily Show.

The history of Bayou Lacroix Cemetery

BY JAMES KEATING, MD

The history of the local Choctaw in the nineteenth century in Hancock County includes the interesting story about the nostalgic and historic community called Bayou LaCroix. By the turn of the 20th century, this village had become a small but busy commercial port located on a navigable waterway -- Bayou LaCroix.

The early inhabitants of Bayou LaCroix were mostly farmers who migrated/emigrated from the Atlantic seacoast or Europe. About 1835, the Zengerling clan came to Bayou LaCroix from Germany. The Ladner clan came to Bayou LaCroix around 1890 from Harrison County.

It was a community of closely-knit families which thrived on small tracts of land of forty to one hundred acres. Around 1835, when Andrew Jackson was enforcing the Indian Removal Act, a small group of Choctaw Indians migrated to Devil’s Swamp next to Bayou LaCroix. Accordingly, they survived and enjoyed a relatively comfortable sustenance farming existence for over sixty years. These Indian families adapted to the local marketplace over the second half of the nineteenth century, and owned their own farms. They built wooden houses, planted crops like sweet potatoes, raised cattle, and supplemented their income doing part time work in the local businesses such as the Dillville Turpentine Kiln or the local sawmill.

The leader of this Choctaw tribe was Chief Thomas Tikaler (Taylor) (1818-c.1903). He spoke English and French in addition to his native Muskogean Choctaw. Because of these skills, he became an ambassador of good will in this community. An early German settler in town, John Zengerling (1815-1896), invited his Indian neighbors to his house often to introduce them to Christianity and the Catholic religion. Later, the white and Indian inhabitants worshiped together in the early churches.

According to the 1890 Census, there were twelve Indian families in Bayou LaCroix. The first white settlers established a Catholic Church and cemetery in 1881 on a five-acre tract of land donated to the Catholic Church by Matthew Verderber, brother-in-law of John Zengerling. This land had not been a cemetery previously. Before 1881, farmers buried their deceased loved ones on private, small family cemeteries embedded in their own farmland. An original small Indian Burial Ground was purportedly located at a different location at the headwaters of Bayou LaCroix several miles north.

Father Henry LeDuc (1837-1897) was the missionary priest that would come to Bayou LaCroix to provide Catholic worship. He supervised the building of a small, simple, wooden chapel and blessed the hallowed, sacred ground consecrated to be the cemetery that would wrap around the church.

Father LeDuc bestowed the name, the Holy Cross Church, to the edifice. A larger, more traditional church was built around 1910 at this same location. All of these inhabitants of this town, both white and Indian, worshiped together in this local Catholic Church, and similarly, all the children attended the local Dillville (Bayou LaCroix) School.

In 1881, Bishop Jannsens confirmed twenty-seven Indians in Bayou LaCroix. During the nineteenth century, Indian children grew up and married into their white neighbor’s families, and, as a result, many citizens in this county can boast of having traceable amount of Choctaw in their ancestry. Today, all that is left of this village is the lovely, old, well-managed cemetery on the old Bayou LaCroix Road.

In 1901, Bayou LaCroix had 156 white, 47 Indian, and one black citizens. In 1903 the remaining Choctaws in Bayou LaCroix became wards of the state and granted free land in Oklahoma. Some went and some came back; some stayed. Consequently, the Choctaw population was greatly reduced at this time, although a significant number of Indians had already married into the white families in the area.

Embedded in the Holy Cross Catholic Church Cemetery is a designated space that from its inception was separate and hallowed known by tradition as the Choctaw Indian Burial Ground. It contains today no tombstones, but only a single, centrally located marker that was placed there in 1980 by Herbert “Bully” Zengerling, a prior member of the Hancock County Board of Supervisors. He collected donations from the Zengerling and Ladner families to cover the cost. Indian dead have been buried there since 1881 in their traditional manner. The cemetery is owned by the Catholic Church, not Hancock County.

It is maintained by the descendants of the original families, as are many of the other small cemeteries in the county. People are still buried in the Bayou LaCroix Cemetery, but by permission only if they have direct ancestor from the original town, but there has been no encroachment on the sacred Indian Burial Ground which has a fixed area/perimeter, the cemetery’s current caretakers said.

An accusation of desecration in the cemetery has been made recently, but cemetery caretakers said that is inaccurate. The only recorded desecration occurred about 1970 when all of the Zengerling tombstones were destroyed with a sledge hammer. The identity of the vandals who committed this crime is unknown.

There has been no encroachment into the Indian Burial Ground by other non-Indian tombs or gravesites, caretakers said.

MS House Weekly Summary - Week of January 24

Committees met frequently during the fourth week of the legislative session, as next Tuesday’s deadline to have House Bills out of their corresponding committees quickly approaches.

After Tuesday, Feb. 1, no additional general bills will be added to the House calendar for consideration.

Members will also meet in session for longer periods to discuss the bills that make it out of their respective committees. Close to 200 House bills have made it out of committee thus far, and this number should increase before the deadline.

One of the bills that reached the House floor this week was House Bill 1509. The bill would prohibit state and local officials from imposing a COVID-19 vaccine mandate. After much debate, HB 1509 passed the House by a vote of 75-41. The bill was then held on a motion to reconsider.

House Bill 607, or Parker’s Law, would create the crime of unlawful delivery of a controlled substance that results in death. In the original bill, a person who sells a controlled substance that directly leads to the user’s death could be charged with first-degree murder. After the introduction of Parker’s Law, a debate ensued regarding controlled substances and the prevalence of fentanyl in these drug-related incidents. An amendment was brought forth changing all of the mentions of “controlled substances” to “fentanyl,” and Amendment 2 passed overwhelmingly by voice vote. HB 607 passed the House by a vote of 102-7 and has been sent to the Senate for consideration.

House Bill 169 would add athletic umpires and referees to the list of people for which the act of simple assault is elevated to aggravated assault. Under Mississippi law, simple assault carries a penalty of up to five years in prison and a $1,000 fine, while a person charged with aggravated assault could face a penalty of one to twenty years in prison and up to a $5,000 fine. After many questions and debate, HB 169 was laid on the table subject to call and remains on the House calendar.

Many other bills were passed with topics including subpoenas, allowing organ donor indication on hunting and fishing licenses, the correction-

Hancock History: A love triangle and a gunfight

In the ongoing story of the Saucier family of Hancock County, the third generation of this specific lineage will be described. Henry Marie Saucier (1734-1810) was the second child of the aforementioned Henri and Barbe in the last Hancock History column.

Henry was born in Fort de Chartres in Illinois. He married Marie Francois Rouseve (1755-1810), who was from Mobile, Alabama. They lived in Plaquemines Parish in Louisiana about fifteen miles downriver from New Orleans. This generation of Saucier brothers invested heavily in tobacco plantations.

In this time frame, the colonists in Louisiana made immense profits selling tobacco to Mexico. The Louisiana colony produced about two million pounds of tobacco a year in the 1780s. Little else is known about this part of the family except that Henry and his wife had two sons, one of whom was Francois Julian Saucier. The Catholic Church historically kept records of baptisms and marriages, which other than gravestones, may be the only landmarks for genealogists to trace family histories. Both Henry and Francois died in 1810 in New Orleans.

Francois Julian Saucier (1775-1823) was the second son of Henry and Marie. Francois was married briefly to Clara Leonard who died in 1804 after being thrown from a horse. She was pregnant at the time. Francois then married Melitte Lavergne (1780-1823) from New Orleans, and they had seven children. Five of these children died at a very young age. Two sons survived to adulthood, Evariste and Henry. Several members of this branch of the Saucier family moved to Mississippi during this time frame and bought plantations on Bayou LaCroix, Bayou Phillip, and Bayou Mulatto. These Sauciers became wealthy landowners before the Civil War. They owned many slaves who planted sugarcane and Sea Island cotton. The family lost a lot of their wealth as a result of the war.

Evariste Valerian Saucier (1814-1870) was a figure in a family tale of love, betrayal, and scandal with a climax ending in a gunfight on the streets of downtown Bay St. Louis. Evariste was born in New Orleans but moved to Shieldsboro (Bay St. Louis). He was postmaster for several years. He married into the wealthy Toulme family and co-owned and managed the Crescent Hotel.

His father-in-law was John B. Toulme, a mayor, merchant, landowner, and entrepreneur. The Crescent Hotel was owned by his brother-in-law, John V. Toulme, and Evariste.

The female protagonist of this story was 18-year-old Madeline V. Toulme (1833-1905) who also came from a lineage of Sauciers. In fact, Evariste and Madeline were cousins. Yet, at age thirty-seven, Evariste fell in love with Madeline in 1851. The marriage produced six children.

The other man in this fatal triangle was Dr. Christopher Post, age twenty-seven, who fell in love with Madeline, even though he was married. Nevertheless, Christopher and Madeline had an affair for some time which eventually became the subject of local gossip. Evariste did find out the news and decided to confront Dr. Post.

The husband warned the doctor that if he did not stop seeing Madeline and get out of town, that he would be dealt with severely.

Dr. Post ignored this warning, and on the evening of April 7, 1870, Evariste confronted Dr. Post on the street in front of his office and engaged him in a gunfight. Evariste shot Dr. Post with five bullets from his revolver and killed the man. Dr. Post shot Evariste once in the hip, which proved to be fatal five days later.

Madeline left town and moved to New York City.

However, two years later, Madeline returned to Shieldsboro.

In fact, she married another Saucier cousin, Judge John Anthony Breath, the year of her return, and they subsequently had two children together. Madeline lived in Shieldsboro the rest of her life, dying in 1905.

Bay-Waveland School District’s $37 million dollar bond

The $37 million dollar bond being promoted by the Bay Waveland School District (BWSD) is about much more than the construction of buildings and grounds. It is a referendum on continuing and expanding a Pre-K 3 and Pre-K 4 curriculum that is not mandated by the State of Mississippi.

Without public input and without workshops attended by citizens and political leaders of Hancock County and the cities of Bay St. Louis and Waveland, a non-mandated program was initiated by the BWSD. Now they are requesting millions of dollars to support this program.

In their bond proposal, the BWSD has as their number one priority, to add 12 classrooms to the Waveland Elementary School for the Pre-K program. The Board gives no dollar value as to the cost of this building construction. Of course, if you add more classrooms and students, you have to increase staff which will then increase the annual budget.

As it is, in the last three years, the BWSD expense budget has increased from over $23 million dollars annually to over $33 million.

During those years, 2020 and 2021 enrollment of students decreased and we will probably see the same for 2022 by the end of this school year.

The BWSD Pre-K program needs to be reassessed with community input. Dramatically increasing budgets with decreasing enrollments need to be stopped.

Taxpayers deserve leaders who will utilize their money wisely. The BWSD is not doing that.

The BWSD bond proposal needs to be defeated.

Man arrested for alleged Long Beach murder booked back into Hancock Jail on assault charge

SEA COAST ECHO

A man accused of murdering his common-law wife in Long Beach earlier this month just a day after bonding out of the Hancock County Jail was booked back into Hancock on Thursday on one count of Assault — Aggravated Domestic Violence.
The Long Beach Police Department arrested Robert Oshinski, 37, on a charge of murder on Jan. 9 for the death of Ashley Barbara, 31. Oshinski allegedly beat her unconscious with a concrete pipe, then dropped her off at Memorial Hospital Gulfport and left. The Harrison County Coroner’s office later determined she died of blunt force trauma.
Barbara’s three children — ages 5, 6 and 11 — were taken into the custody of Child Protective Services.

In Harrison County Justice Court on Wednesday, officials testified that Oshinski made at least one of the children clean the blood from their mother’s wounds before taking her to the hospital, and had apparently told them that he had just found her unconscious and was unable to revive her.
The day before allegedly beating Barbara to death, Oshinski was released from the Hancock County Jail on a $10,000 bond. Hancock investigators arrested him on Jan. 6 on the charge of Assault: Aggravated, manifesting extreme indifference to human life that stemmed from an October 2015 incident in which he allegedly ran over a Hancock County man with a 4-wheeler, then repeatedly beat him in the back of the head. It is not yet clear why the arrest occurred several years after the alleged incident.

The identity of the alleged victim in that case has not yet been released to the public, but court records say he had been dating a sister of the woman Oshinski was dating at the time.
Oshinski is being held on a $1 million bond in the murder case, but Hancock County Jail records say he is “not bondable” in the assault case.

Theft reported at Edmond Fahey’s cemetery

BY CASSANDRA FAVRE
STAFF WRITER

Recently, more than 50 bronze vases were stolen from the graves at Gulf Coast Memorial Cemetery on Longfellow Road in Bay St. Louis, Bradford O’Keefe Funeral Homes Chief Executive Officer Jeffrey O’Keefe said Friday.
“We just wanted to get the word out to the people,” he said. “We certainly don’t want anybody in our vicinity trying to recycle stolen material. We would like to alert the community to maybe kind of keep an eye out.”

The cemetery is owned by Edmond Fahey Funeral Home, which Bradford O’Keefe acquired back in December 2021.

MEET JOJO!

He and his brother came from a feral colony. They were in a loving foster home for 6 weeks, and have come a long way in getting friendlier and pettable. They’re now getting more socialization skills in the shelter cat room, where we hope someone will see past the shyness to the loving kitty underneath.

MEET PRINGLES!

He’s one of the new kids on the block, but he is quickly making an impression on our staff and volunteers. He is always smiling! Plus, he is calm, affectionate, and has a wonderful face that’s perfect for patting and kissing. Pringles is a 2 to 3 year old Labrador Retriever mix who has many more endearing attributes. He is comfortable with the other dogs in his living area, and seems quite the gentleman. He is a very gentle walker, so if you’re looking for a walking buddy, Pringles is ready to walk into the sunset with you. We are unsure yet if he is house or crate trained. This handsome, loving dude is such a great dog! He is so very well behaved, and has impressed us with his always happy demeanor. (We think he’s very handsome too!)

Please stop by and meet Pringles during our visiting hours Mon-Fri 10am-3pm (Tues 12pm-3pm). Please bring your dog(s) and kiddos along for the meet-n-greet to ensure compatibility.

Thoughts on Spirituality

By C. GERALD RICHARDSON, D. MIN.

C. Gerald Richardson, D. Min.

What is spirituality? Is it a concept which can be readily defined? Is it a matter of opinion, or may we consult biblical and/or other theological and philosophical insights to arrive at an answer? How does it impact the lives of people?

A good place to begin the discussion is with the acknowledgment that spirituality and religion are not the same. Religions involve belief systems and doctrinal positions which establish boundaries of faith and practice. They point to spiritual attributes which are valued by their adherents, but they are not exhaustive regarding the breadth of spiritual wisdom. Religion can be, and often is, one of the paths toward spiritual experience, but it is far from the definition of it. Religions vary greatly. Some are quite rigid with strict rules and expected beliefs and behaviors. Others are broader and offer a range of doctrinal positions and welcome diversity of thought.

Spirituality, on the other hand, is different. Psychology and other disciplines related to mental and emotional understanding are generally agreed that there exists within the human experience factors which drive feelings and behavior. Freud recognized this years ago and identified them as Id, ego, and super-ego. A more common expression of this reality for many of us is the concept of spirit. There is a spirit within each of us. It is not related to religion, but it is a guiding function of our interior lives.

A profound book published in 2021 by naturalist Jane Goodall and writer Douglas Abrams is entitled, The Book of Hope. In addition to its important work in the field of environmental concern, the book is an important primer in the field of spirituality. Goodall, who is herself among the great wisdom prophets of our time, offers valuable insight into a sense of spirit which recognizes religion, but she also understands that it is more.

Beautiful mountain vistas, powerful oceans, the animal kingdom, internal self-reflection, meaningful relationships with other humans, as well as the larger world, all feed our spiritual nature.

For many of us our religious commitments play a significant role in spirituality, but it is not the only path to that which is deepest within us. It is surely possible to value that deep spiritual place in our lives while knowing and respecting that there are other paths which are equally important to many people. This is true all over the world.

Humans of various cultures and perspectives have spiritual lives which give meaning to their experience. Some call it religion. Others use different terms and names. All are important. They often combine to make our world a better place. The only times they damage our society are when they introduce division and hatred into our relationships.

We are spiritual creatures. That spirit has the potential to enrich life and improve the world. May we recognize it and be thankful for it.

in July 2021 about the city’s budget plans. The complaint was filed by former city Councilman Larry Smith. It is the second time the commission has ruled Knoblock violated the Open Meetings Act via email—he was fined $500 in September 2021 over an email sent to fellow councilmen about city business back in 2019. That complaint was filed by Bay-resident Andrew Burrell. Burrell’s complaint against Knoblock alleged he communicated with other council members via email in May, July and September 2019, according to the Ethics Commission report at the time, but the commission determined only one of the complaints pointed out an actionable violation of the Open Meetings Act. The Bay council conceded at the time that Knoblock sent an email on May 14, 2019 to three other council members. The last sentence of the email implores his fellow council members to “assist Public Works Director and City Engineer in finding funding to ensure that (drainage) issues can be corrected.” “The council’s response explains that while Councilman Knoblock ‘was not opening the floor for deliberation or prompting deliberation of an action item... Councilman Knoblock realizes and acknowledges that the last sentence of his email may be considered a violation of the Open Meetings Act. “The council argues that Councilman Knoblock did not intend to violate the Open Meetings Act, but understands ‘that the email could be interpreted that Knoblock was persuading fellow councilman to vote on a budget that makes funding available for drainage issues.’” The commission determined in September 2021 that “the content of the email messages goes beyond merely conveying information and should have been expressed at an open meeting.” In the new complaint, Smith alleges that Knoblock violated the Open Meetings Act again by discussing city business via email on July 21, 2021. That alleged incident occurred about two months before the commission ruled against Knoblock on Burrell’s complaint. “Specifically,” according to the latest ethics commission report, “Mr. Smith alleges that Mr. Knoblock sent an email to five council members: directly to two councilmen, Doug Seal and Gene Hoffman (as well as Mayor Mike Favre and City Clerk Sissey Gonzales); and blind copied three councilmen, Jeffrey Reed, Kyle Lewis and Josh DeSalvo regarding budget issues. From the record provided, there is no evidence that any of the council members replied to this email.” In the email, titled “Budget analysis and changes,” Knoblock detailed several items from the then-upcoming budget proposal for the city’s 2022 fiscal year, and told fellow council members what he would like to change. He advocated against adding a city clerk position, claiming it was too costly and not needed “at this time.” He also said department heads had already been given competitive pay raises and said for the upcoming budget, their salaries should remain the same, but “lower-tier employees should receive either a three percent across-board raise or fifty cents an hour.” He also said staffing should remain at current levels, “with the exception of police and fire,” where — based on population increases — the city needed to “add two police and fire positions” and to increase presence at fire station number 2. He also said the city should add a parks & recreation director “as recommended by Councilman Lewis. This could prove to be an economic boost to the city by hosting tournaments and other sporting events.” Knoblock said he thought the council should “adopt a budget very close to the 2020-2021 budget,” plus add new pieces of equipment for Public Works and continue to fund police and fire equipment and add a new building inspector to help with site plan review, inspections and code enforcement. Knoblock also said in the email that “I would like to see two or four beach volleyball courts at the end of Washington near the comfort station. This would promote more beach activities. We should look at how we can increase the size of the baseball fields for 13-14 year-old teams.” He also said the council should set millage and “instruct the comptroller to design a budget based on rolling back at least one mil, and replacing one mil of casino revenue and backing it with one mil of ad valorem tax. I would move that casino revenue in park and recreation to fund the new park and rec director and rec and park projects.” “If we adopt a conservative budget focused on projects,” Knoblock said in the email, “we can achieve many great improvements in the city.” The council’s response to the ethics commission’s probe about the email said that it “was sent the night before the council was to resume a recessed meeting ... to discuss the city’s budget,” according to the commission’s report. “Additionally, ‘by 9:15 a.m. the next day, Knoblock forwarded this email to the city council clerk, Caitlin Bourgeois, asking that his email about budget recommendations be added to the agenda for the next city council meeting and disseminated to the public.’” The city argued that “the council did not violate the Open Meetings Act, because while ‘Knoblock’s email expressed information and his opinions on the budget, but it did not prompt the members of the council to reply or discuss the budget or exchange ideas or opinions about the budget. Members of the public body merely received a group email.’ The city also argued that “the facts in this case are different” from a previous ruling — Oliver v. Bay St. Louis — “where the commission held that a single communication sent to a quorum of a public body can be a violation of the Open Meetings Act, even though there is no active exchange or discussion among the quorum of the public body. In that case, the commission held that a communication directed to a quorum of a public body from a member of that public body can be the first step in the decision-making process that leads to the formation and determination of public policy, particularly when the communication is trying to influence, promote, lobby or otherwise exhort the public body to action.” In this case, the city argued, “Knoblock sent a solitary email about the budget after hours the night before a recessed meeting was to resume,” and “after sending the email to his fellow council members, ‘sent his email to the council clerk so that it would be added to the materials and agenda for the recessed meeting to be distributed to the public.’” The city said the email should be considered “information-only” and should be considered as “agenda times and materials that were distributed to members of the public body and ... made available to the staff of the public body in sufficient time for duplication and forwarding to the members of the public body and ... made available to the public at the time of the meeting.” However, the ethics commission determined that “discussions or deliberations among a quorum of council members outside a properly noticed open meeting, whether physically or electronically assembled, can violate the Mississippi Open Meetings Act, when such deliberations concern matters over which the public body has supervision, control, jurisdiction or advisory power.” The commission ruled that a violation can occur when a quorum of a public body outside a properly-noticed open meeting “shares information or opinions about a matter under their authority. ... The exchange of communications about such matters between or among a quorum of board members is a ‘deliberation,’ and an exchange of text messages or emails are ‘deliberations’ via ‘teleconference device.’” Therefore, the commission said, “a single member of a public body can violate the Open Meetings Act when he or she sends a single communication to a quorum in an attempt to influence the quorum regarding a matter under its authority.” The commission said that in his email, Knoblock “attempted to directly address and influence the vote of his following council members.”

The commission said that, in its response to the previous Burrell complaint less than two months prior to the email to the quorum of the council, the city pledged that “Knoblock will not engage in group emailing because one-way communication to multiple councilmen may be perceived as deliberation and should be avoided at all costs.” Knoblock’s July 2021 message, the commission determined, “specifically requests, among a quorum of his fellow council members, that they take action regarding the 2021-2022 budget, outside the view of the public. That he belatedly requested that the contents of his email be included on the agenda for the next open meeting, appears to be recognition that his actions violated the Open Meetings Act.” Knoblock had 30 days to contest the commission’s ruling from the time he received notification of it. He said this week he has not yet determined whether to appeal the ruling. He said he wasn’t trying to improperly influence any member of the council, but rather was trying to communicate with fellow councilman about important information on behalf of the people of Bay St. Louis. “The bottom line is, I work 12 hours a day,” Knoblock said. “How is everybody expected to come together and do a budget like this” in person without communicating with each other somehow, either via telephone or email.

MSDH reports 10th pediatric COVID-19-related death

SEA COAST ECHO

Last week, the Mississippi State Department of Health (MSDH) is confirming its 10th pediatric death in a child under 18. None of the 10 pediatric deaths were vaccinated. Vaccinations are now available for any child five years of age and older at all county health departments. Boosters are recommended for those over 12 to prevent hospitalizations and death. Since COVID was diagnosed in Mississippi in March of 2020, the

MSDH has reported:

- one death in an infant – under one year of age
- two deaths in the 1-5 year age range
- one death in the 6-10 year age range
- six deaths in the 11-17 year age range

State Epidemiologist Dr. Paul Byers encourages parents to discuss childhood vaccination with their health care provider.

“Currently we only have seven percent of the 5-11 age group fully vaccinated and 37 percent of the 12-17 age group fully vaccinated. Vaccination is the best protection for our children who are eligible to receive it. For those under 5 years of age, it is critically important that everyone around the infant or child are vaccinated.” Beyond vaccination and booster shots, protection efforts such as social distancing, wearing masks and avoiding large crowds continue to be recommended.

Shore Thing: Mississippi Muskies??

Shore Thing Fishing Report

BY CPT. SONNY SCHINDLER

When it comes to fishing, I think you always need to be open to new ideas, areas, tactics and especially LURES. This past summer, I had the pleasure of fishing with Chris Brooks and his daughter Heidi. Chris wanted his daughter to catch a few eating fish, but really wanted to try out some hand-made Muskie Lures his buddy makes. Well, we knocked out the eating fish quickly. We drifted one shore line along cat island. The trout and redfish were very cooperative, and we left em biting to go try his lures. I almost never troll

Heidi and Chris Brooks with a monster bull red caught on a custom BOMB Muskie lure lures, so this was gonna be different kind of experience for all of us. When we rounded the east side of Cat Island, I could see several boats working in schools of bait and birds near the ship channel. All we had were 2 big game spinning set ups. It only took a few minutes, and one of the 5 inch jointed diving baits got nailed. It was a big Jack Crevalle, and Chris was over the moon. A little while later we caught a shark on another trolling lure.

Some midday storms kicked up, and we headed back to the pass harbor. Just outside the harbor, we could see the big explosions, from feeding bull reds. I don't think the big Muskie Lure had made it out behind the boat more than a minute, before a huge bull red inhaled it. Chris was super excited his friends baits worked in saltwater, and I was thrilled to catch fish using very different methods and lures.

Months later I checked in with Blake Millett, the man behind name of BOMB lures. Turns out, BOMB is an acronym for Blake's Obnoxious Muskie Baits. They are huge, loud and painted (by hand) in obnoxiously bright colors. In a complimentary statement, I fully agree with the Lures name. Blake, who lives in Utah, is very passionate about his baits. He just wanted to "build a better mousetrap" per say. Outside of the inland lakes of the U.S., He told me his baits have been used in Alaska, the East Coast, and now Mississippi. He comes from a carpentry background, knows fishing and apparently knows what works. He was also proud that his baits are handmade in the good ole US of A. Blake will even do custom paint jobs, if requested.

We talked about muskies, and saltwater big game fishing. I gotta say, I was really excited when he mentioned possibly making a big game popper we could throw down here for Tuna, dolphin, Jack's and reds.

What can I say, Chris introduced me to a newish way of fishing, some new lures and a new friend. I just Might have to get more into this Muskie fishing?...

Nines President, Shelley Palmature presents Marilyn Galus "Most Improved Golfer" award.

BY SHIRLEY HALTERMAN

We are all looking forward to safely celebrating the Christmas Holidays and New Year with family and friends. When you read this the year 2022 will be a month or so old, and we hope it is turning out to be a good one for you all.

While 20 of our members signed up to play our usual Trophy Day on December 7th, the weather wasn't very cooperative and only a few actually played as the rain threatened yet again. Therefore, no scores were recorded and we will try for a Trophy Day again in January. We wonder what Mother Nature has in store for us next year.

On Tuesday, December 14th, the weather was more cooperative as we gathered to play golf and have our Annual Christmas Luncheon. Twenty-seven of us joined in our Christmas Scramble while a few other gals joined us for lunch afterward. As usual we collected toys for needy children. This year's Scramble winners was the team of Sylvia Corban, Dinah Knobloch and Therese Mauterer recording a score of only 39. Great job gals! In second place with only three more strokes was the team made up of Brigitte Becker, Marilyn Galus and Marlene Gossard. In addition, Lenna Weisenhorn had a Chip-In on the 6th hole. During our luncheon, Marilyn Galus was awarded the "Most Improved Golfer of 2021". Congratulations, Marilyn.

On the following Tuesday, December 21st, only 11 gals were brave enough to sign up play "Par 3s and Par 5s, as the weather once again turned against us. By the Tuesday morning, only seven brave souls showed up to play as the previous day's rainfall had made the Cardinal Course cart path only. Fun was had, but no game was played.

December 28th brought us better weather conditions for a game called, "One Club + Putter." This game is a scramble so consulting with your teammates is essential to choosing the

I look forward to working with all of our partners to make sure Mississippi’s Gulf Coast remains a premier destination for the aviation and aerospace industries.”

The $5.24 million project was awarded to Drace Construction Corp., of Long Beach, in November 2019. It was funded in part by a $1.85 million RESTORE grant.

“Port and Harbor Commission is committed to being the cornerstone of Mississippi’s aviation industry,” CEO Bill Cotter. “Thanks to the support of federal, state and local partners, we invested over $5 million in this project to support business operations and continued growth.”

The new hangar is already leased by Tyonek Services Group, Inc., an aviation maintenance service provider with numerous public and private clients including the Department of Defense and Boeing.

“This hangar is a crucial component of Tyonek’s increasing support for our Department of Defense customers,” said Steve Adlich, President, Tyonek Services Group, Inc. “We appreciate the strong partnerships we have here in Mississippi that have provided the infrastructure that allows us to expand our operations and bring more jobs to Hancock County.”

Among Tyonek’s work at Stennis, the company supports the Naval Air Systems Command (NAVAIR), a program of the U.S. Navy. NAVAIR’s international aviation programs have been leveraging the existing logistics infrastructure of Gulfport’s Naval Supply Systems Command (NAVSUP) facilities and services located aboard the Naval Construction Battalion Center (NCBC), as well as other existing facilities and resources in the local area to conduct various foreign military sales (FMS) support activities, and they have emerged as a prime employer in the area of FMS aircraft and aircraft systems maintenance, repair, and overhaul (MRO) services.

As a result of the partnership with the NAVAIR International, business activity has increased throughout the Mississippi Gulf Coast. Specifically, the region is now experiencing more foreign defense sales activity flowing through the state, thereby growing and diversifying the regional economy.

The activity is also contributing to Mississippi’s efforts to expand the defense industry’s presence in the state and ensuring that military assets align with the National Defense Strategy. Collectively, the close partnership fostered with the NAVAIR International aviation programs provides strategic benefits that simultaneously enhance regional economic development and strengthens U.S. International relationships and interests.

The RESTORE Hangar is among nearly 66,000 square feet of hangar space that was built or acquired at Stennis International in the past year. The hangars are part of a strategy to make Hancock County’s community airport the cornerstone of the aviation industry in Mississippi.

In fiscal year 2022, Stennis International has budgeted over $32 million in capital projects, including new hangars, apron extensions and life-cycle maintenance projects. Another 24,000 square feet of hangar space is expected by the end of next fiscal year.

“The Port and Harbor Commission continues to invest for the future of Hancock County,” said CEO Bill Cotter. “Our portfolio of hangar space allows existing tenants to expand and attracts new businesses to the area. We receive calls every week from companies looking to locate or expand here at Stennis International.”

In recent years, Hancock County has grown 230 new jobs and seen nearly $100 million in capital investment in aerospace development. Additionally, the next generation of aerospace workforce will be trained locally at Pearl River Community College’s planned $10 million workforce development center at the airport.

Located in Kiln, Stennis International is Hancock County’s community airport. It features an 8,500-foot runway rated to carry the world’s largest cargo planes. It is home to 15 aerospace companies serving both general aviation and military aircraft. The airport is covered by an onsite firefighting unit, and the FAA Air Traffic Control Tower is open daily. Million Air FBO provides amenities including a comfortable lounge, café, aircraft refueling and more. For more information, visit www.flystennis.com.

The Mystic Krewe of the Seahorse takes its name from the famous USS Seahorse in the Battle of Bay St. Louis during the War of 1812. According to history the USS Seahorse fearlessly sailed into the Bay of St. Louis and single-handedly fought the entire British Armada. Before eventually sinking, the Seahorse was able to disable or sink several British war ships, which delayed the British advance on New Orleans. The delay allowed Andrew Jackson sufficient time to fortify his position and defeat the British at the Battle of New Orleans.

Organized by all volunteers, “this non-profit krewe has really developed well in a short period of time”, said Ginny Cabell, marketing chairman. “Our members have helped us brand something very unique. The krewe has enveloped a community, brought in out of town visitors from all fifty states and last year, even across the ocean, and allowed us to give back to our community in many ways.” The krewe’s monthly meetings include a 50/50 drawing to help various causes in the community. Just to name a few, there is the Bay St. Louis Community Garden, Ruth’s Roots, 4-H Stem Program, King’s Kitchen, Brenda’s House, scholarship funds set up for fallen Officer Michael Boutte and Entergy Lineman Cayce Seal, and autism room for a nearby school, and Marine Corp. League for veteran services in our area.

The Lundi Gras parade is growing each year and was named a Top Twenty Event or Festival by Southeast Tourism Society, a non-profit organization dedicated to promoting travel and tourism within the twelve neighboring states. Parade revelers will enjoy the signature seahorse light-up beads and LED throws. All visitors are encouraged to wear their pirate attire in support of the krewe rolling through Old Town Bay St. Louis. The Raw Oyster Marching Club will be performing as a walking group with the 90-plus pirate and coastal theme decorated golf carts.

The krewe’s Grand Marshall this year is Renee Loranger, Food Network’s 2021 Halloween Baking Championship Grand Prize Winner and entrepreneur of Sugar Pop Baking Company in Waveland, MS. We are so excited to have Renee riding with us this year.

The parade will roll at 5 pm Monday, February 28th from the corner of Depot Way and Booker St., travel down Ne-caise Ave., Main St., 2nd St., deMontluzin Ave., Beach Blvd., and then disband at the parking garage on Court Street.

If you’d like to participate in the parade, go to mkotsh.com or email mkotshtreasurer@gmail.com for an application.
